Unusual New Probable Missile-Related Facilities Seen Under Construction

25X1

Two new probable missile-associated facilities have been identified under construction on recent [redacted] photography. One of these is located adjacent to the housing and administration area of the Drovyanaya ICBM Complex Support Facility (51-32N 113-01E), and the other near Manzovka (44-11N 132-30E), some 11 nautical miles (nm) northeast of the Kremovo MRBM Launch Complex.

[redacted] Although widely separated from one another (see Figure 3), all three of these facilities have much in common, not only in physical appearance, but also in their construction timing, their positions within approximately 100 nm of the Soviet Border in the vicinity of China and Mongolia, and their locations near Soviet offensive missile activity.

The general appearance of the [redacted] facilities, however, suggests a defensive missile role. Each of the [redacted] facilities consists of a generally circular perimeter service road, approximately 800 feet in diameter, with nine circular positions located contiguous to the inside of the service road.
